Talks were given by the Rev. C. H. Pinnick and by the Sunday school superintendent, W. L. Parkins. The church was prettily decorated in flowers and a beautiful white flower emblem of the purity of a Mother's Love, was presented each by the flower girls, Misses Agnes Ward and Pearl Filby. The Rev. Mr. Pinnick followed in a beautiful sermon appropriate of the Day, in which he showed how Mother was the one who was more than queen in the home. She was that which made the home. In the evening he also preached an excellent sermon.

She Was No Paul Pry. A woman who had a very faithful servant presented her with a ticket to a fashionable theater and was surprised when the girl returned home quite early. "Didn't you like the theater?" the mistress asked.

"I did that, mum, and it was fine."

"But why did you not see the play out? You are home early."

"Indeed, I did, mum! There were grand ladies in the boxes and elegant gentlemen next me, and I had a lovely seat and enjoyed myself looking at the splendid picture as much as anybody. But when they took the picture up and I found myself looking into a gentleman's house and some ladies come in and began discussing family matters then I came away. It wasn't for the likes of me to sit and listen to family secrets. I hope I know my place better than that, mum."

"THEN I CAME AWAY."

Have you trouble of any kind arising from disordered stomach? Go to your drug store and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Pink Pills, which is positively guaranteed to cure you and make you well.

PAID FOR HIS HASTE. However, He Stood the Gaff Like a Dead Game Sport.

The huge bulk of Senator Boies Penrose might have been seen emerging hurriedly from the big Washington hotel where he lives, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Press. It was no trouble at all to observe that he was in great haste to go somewhere, especially when he hailed the only taxicab in sight and bade the driver break all speed ordinances getting him to the Union station.

"But," began the taxi driver. "No buts," commanded the Broodinging senator. "I haven't a minute to lose."

"There's a gentleman just—" "Doesn't make any difference," interrupted Penrose. "Can't help it if you're waiting on two gentlemen or a bride party. I've got to have this taxi. Hurry, now."

"You see, sir, the man—" Penrose burrowed through the door into the taxicab just as if it were all arranged and said: "Union station. Quick!"

Penrose is in the habit of getting what he desires, and the taxi driver, noting the glitter of his uncompromising black eyes, waived further argument.

The scene shifts now to the Union station, where Penrose is emerging hastily from the taxicab. Bystanders look on and wonder where the big passenger could have tucked himself in so small a vehicle.

"Here; keep the change," says Penrose, handing the driver a dollar bill as he rushes toward his train.

"But the other gentlemen already owed $7.50," the driver managed to blurt out.

"I've heard of such things happening," growled Penrose. But he paid it without another word.

Ready With His Answer. An English tourist in the Emerald Isle who was telling an Irish peasant about the immense size of the British empire said:

"Well, Pat, and do you know that the sun never sets on the king's dominions?"

"No, your honor," replied Pat. "Well, such is the case," went on the tourist. "But do you know the reason why?"

Pat immediately answered, "I suppose it is because heaven is afraid to trust an Englishman in the dark."
